Project proposal

I would like to do a final project about toddlers and reading. It's a topic that is a part of every day in my house. This site will offer a number of things:

1. The benefits of getting even very young children active with reading.
2. Tips to getting your children reading and playing with books.
3. Recommendations on the best in children's literature.
4. Local resources to help small children and beyond as they become active readers.
5. Deals to economically increase your library - and what to do with books your children have outgrown.

Purpose

The purpose of this site is to promote literacy, starting with the very young. It also should provide parents with easy and relatively inexpensive ways to help their children grow.

Competitive analysis

There are a number of websites that touch on reading with children. All of them are parts of larger sites about raising children.

The benefits of reading to children are well documented. All these sites offer useful tips for parents.

The design of this sites are very basic. They are all informational and text heavy. They are oddly the same design, with a header, links, usually down the left-hand side, a middle content area and advertising down the right. Each site's content area is white.

Font use is very standard. The sites have ordinary, if pleasant use of color, used in a conservative manner.

Target audience
This site will be aimed at families with small children, 6 months and up. It will serve families of low to moderate incomes. This will be aimed at suburban, but slightly hip parents interested in the educational growth of their children.

Audience action
People should come away from this site with a call to action. Parents should find useful information with simple tips to implement that information.

Image
This site should have a clean and modern look, with softening touches. It needs to find a balance between educational and inviting. This will primarily be a type focused site, but it should avoid narrative forms as much as possible, instead providing lists, questions and answers and other alternative story forms. Ideally, even though this site is about children's literature, parents should feel smarter and more confident when they leave.
